Currently, the international security situation is continuously undergoing profound and complicated changes. Peace and development are still the main themes and the trend of multipolarization is irreversible.

Meanwhile, traditional and non-traditional security threats remain serious challenges to international and regional security.

Corvington Courier & Security Service follows closely local and international security situation and developments in order to be able to provide up-to-date decision support and awareness/security training courses tailored for managers, businessmen and diplomats travelling or living in unsafe or high risk level countries.

Our Approach Combines Best Practice Risk Management and Risk Analysis Concepts

The main purpose of a risk management process is to plan, organise, lead, and control the activities of a operations or project in order to minimise the effects of risks on its objectives. It can also be defined through four main steps, illustrated in the figure below.

A risk-optimized strategy relies on the use of risk analysis:

- Risk identification - discovering, defining and reporting risks in the most extensive way possible,
- Risk assessment - determining identified risks' criticality by measuring the likelihood to occur and the severity of their occurrence's impacts, which allows to rank and prioritize risks,
- Definition of a risk mitigation plan - selecting options, actions and costs to be taken in order to set risk at an acceptable level based on project constraints and objectives.
- Implementation - once risk analysis is carried out, actions must be implemented (Emergency Response Plans) and risks communicated and followed-up in a proactive and iterative process.

Global tracking system - exclusive by Corvington Courier & Security Service (CCSS SA) and Scandinavian Risk Solutions (SRS)

SRT 306 tracker

- Developed in Sweden
- Microphone and speaker
- Quadband GSM/GPRS
- Water Resistant (IP54)
- Intelligent power saving

SRT306 is a small, portable lightweight GSM/GPRS handset with a multitude of alarm and report functionalities, as well as exceptional battery life and performance. The SRT306 is equipped with GPS, alarm button, microphone & speaker, DTMF receiver, vibration sensor, vibrator, battery and built-in antenna for GSM.

How GPS tracking works

GPS Tracking devices can be used to track people, vehicles and other assets world-wide via a system of satellites. At any given time, there are at least three satellites that triangulate the position of the GPS tracking device by CCSS/SRS operations center.

By continuing to triangulate the coordinates at regular intervals, the satellites can determine the speed of an object, the distance travelled and how long it has been stationary.

The SRT 306 uses GPS signals that allow an accurate geolocation world-wide. The application can be used for location for stolen vehicles, tracking for cash transfer and immediate location in case of kidnapping.
